Dr. H. C. Burleigh
Bath, Ontario

Dear Dr. Burleigh:

My account of the Shorey family went out promptly to our children and sundry cousins; but Kenneth Shorey of Toronto has not acknowledged it nor answered my question about the Percys. From my slight exchange of letters with him I assume he is not likely to do the former until he can do the latter. Perhaps the descendants of his grandfather's second wife are not accessible. Our children, as I expected, are enthusiastic about the report, and our son has run an impressive count on the number of his paternal ancestors who are now identified. These are nearly all on my father's side, since my mother's parents came from England to Wisconsin in the 1850's and died long before I was born, leaving no clue that I know of to their antecedents.

The Shorey account reached my daughter in Veracruz just before her sixth child was born on January 30. No doubt you had a part in naming the infant. Finding a name for a sixth child may be a problem, especially a second name; and I credit the account with reminding her husband that a near and highly regarded forebear^{of his} was a Metcalf, and so her fourth son is Roger Metcalf Myers. This Metcalf family supposedly came over with Lord Baltimore and may well have been from the Catholic branch of the family. The Myers are Quakers.

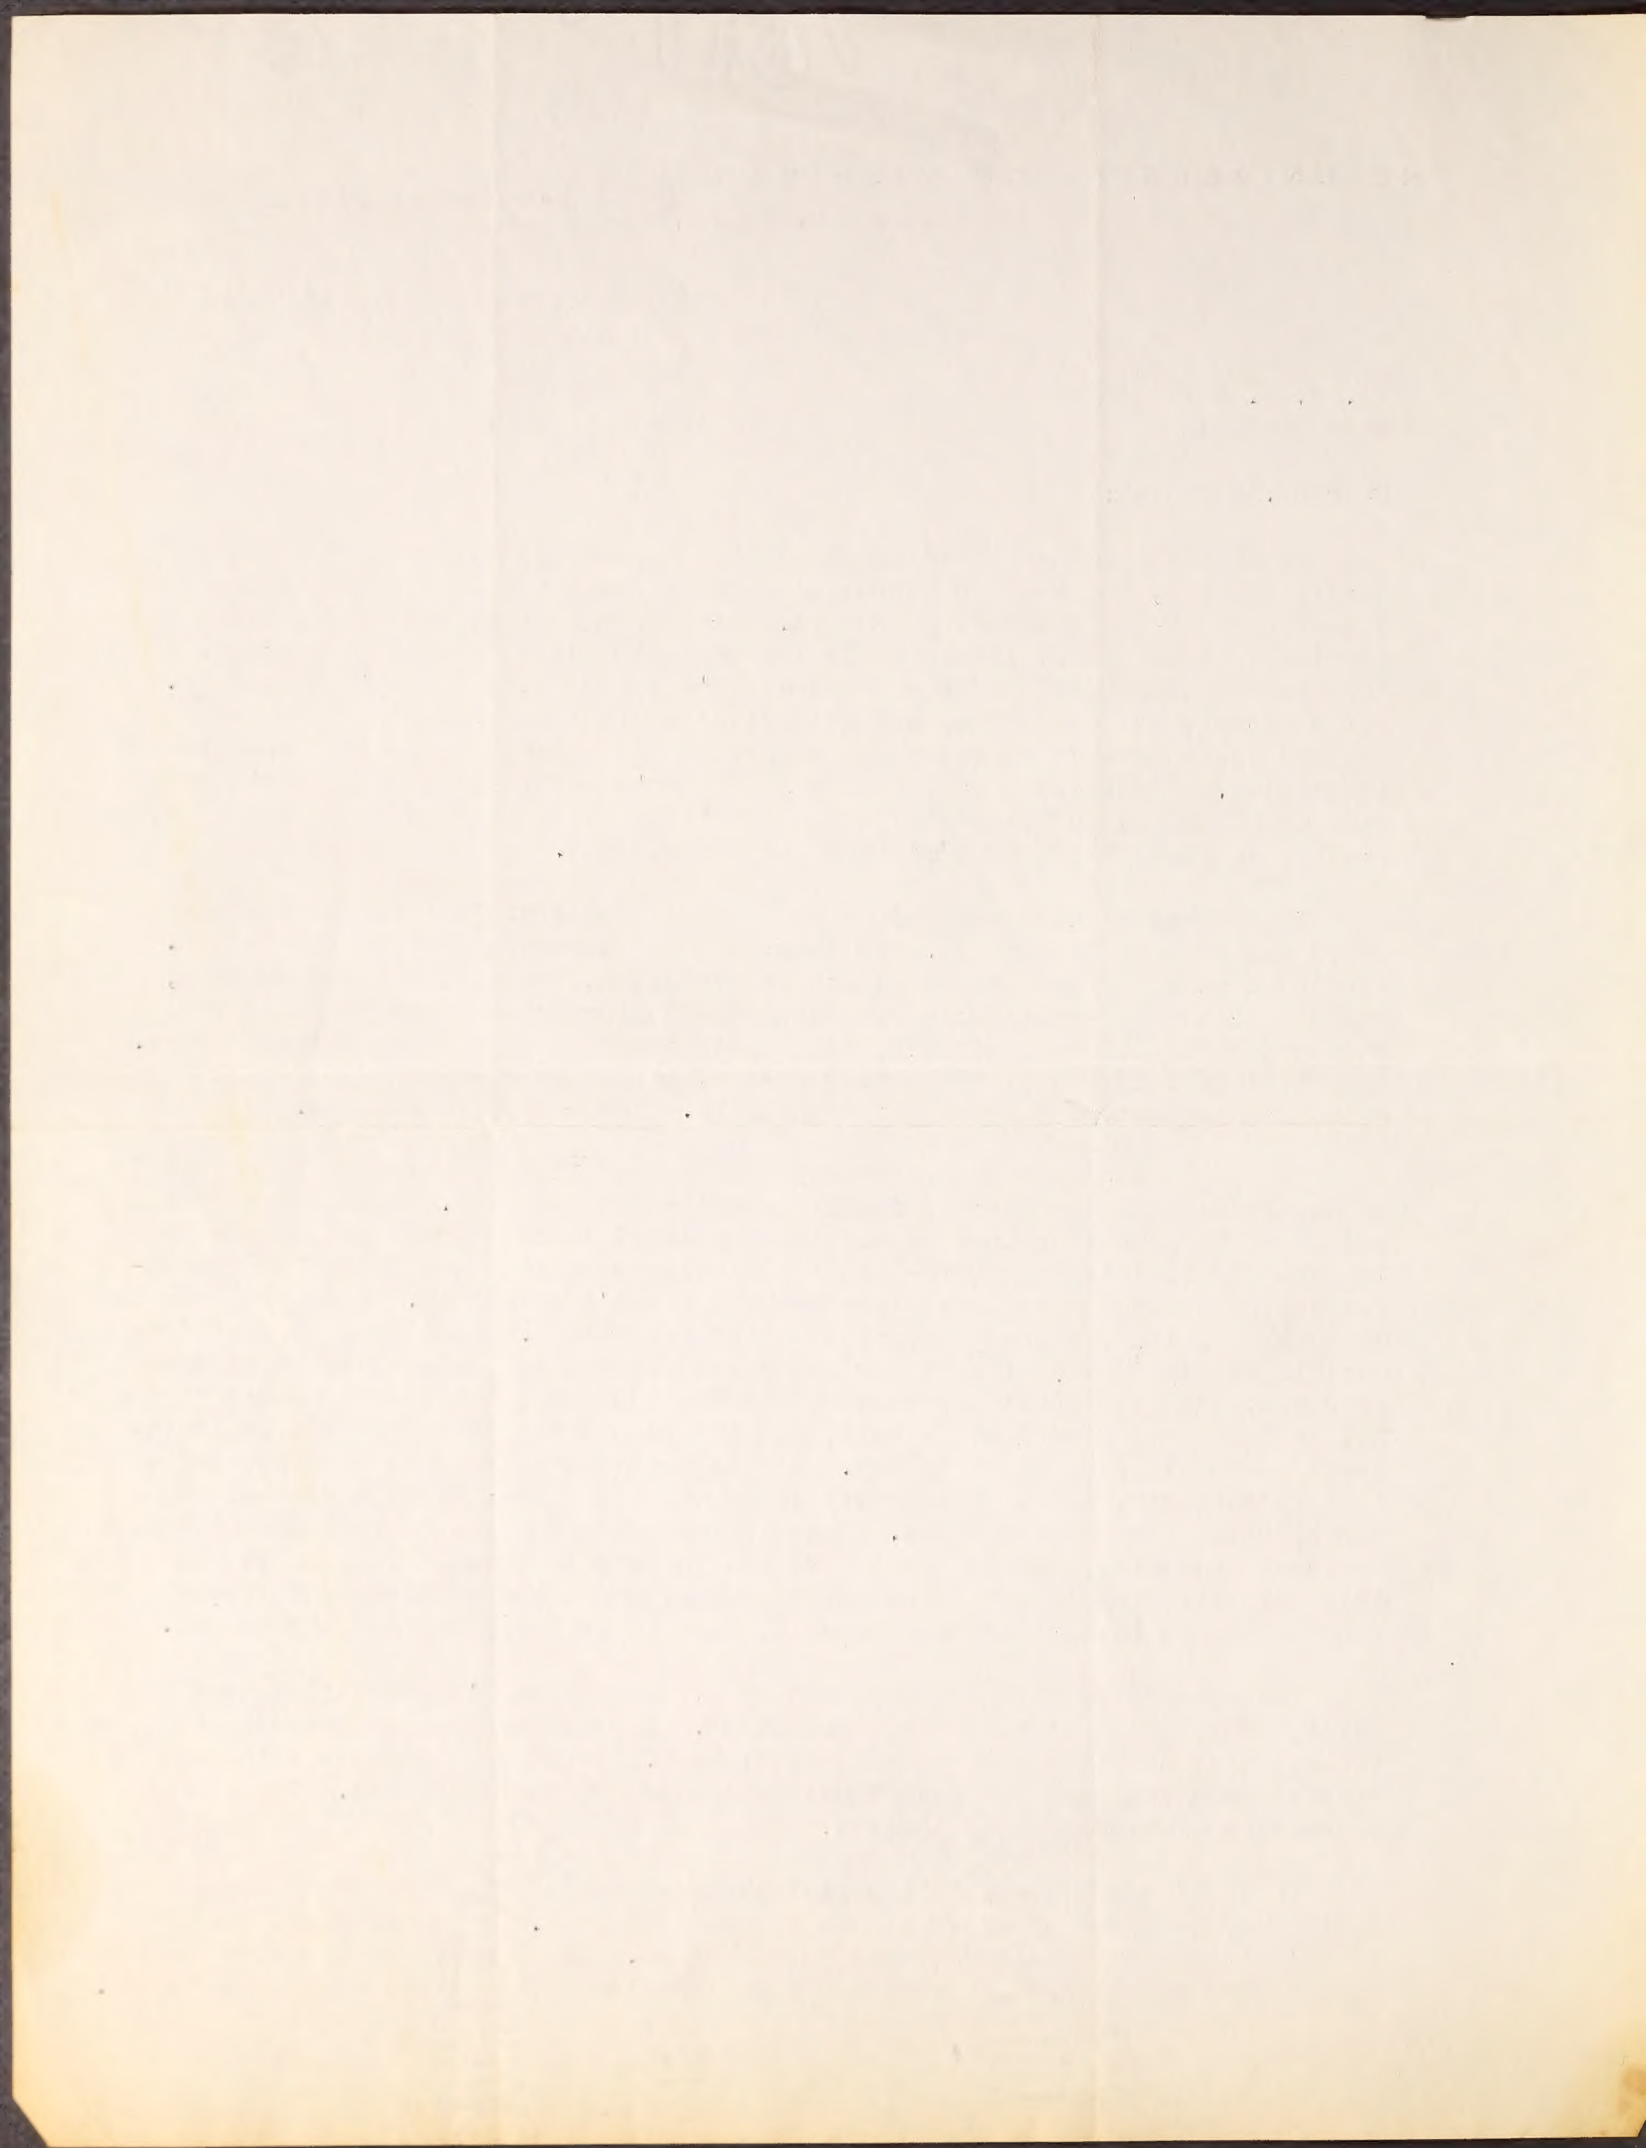

I suppose you must be of the impression that it is not quite clear that I am descended from the Metcalf family on which you reported. Your references led me to take another look in our library and I found there a set of the New England Genealogical Register - about 100 volumes of it - and Savage's Genealogical Dictionary, as well as other ^{sources} items I haven't looked at. I dipped into the Register a little, looking especially at Walker items. You reported that Jane Metcalf married "Samuel (?) Walker" and I encountered two references to such a marriage, one with doubt expressed as to the identity, but you concluded that Philip Walker married Jane Metcalf, and it seems clear that this Philip ^{was} the great grandfather of David Shorey. At one point he is said to have married a Jane Butterworth, but I notice that among their children there^{are} a Michael and a Sarah, which are Metcalf names. Genealogical detail slips quickly from the mind, at least from mine, and I do not want you to take time again to plow through this material; but if you do happen to remember why you settled on Philip as your choice as husband of Jane Metcalf, I would be happy to know the reason.

Your correction of my understanding of Alatheia Gary's ancestry missed my point, as my brief statement was ambiguous. I knew she was the granddaughter, not the daughter, of Stephen Gary and Mary Gilbert. I just thought he was the second Stephen, and you said she was granddaughter of the third Stephen. But your correction cleared up other points.

It would seem that your Loyalist records must surely find an honorable resting place where others, such as I, can find them. I should think that Queen's University would be eager to have them. It seems to be the first principle in running a library that it must not pre-judge the tastes of its customers.

Sincerely,

Shorey Petersen

The well known family of Shorey originates in Otter Creek, Vermont, where David Shorey and his wife Abigail were living in 1777. Records indicate that he with a relative Robert Parry, h. s., bought 50 acres of land in partnership in the year 1772. Here David, then a young man of 25 built a house. Nothing is known of David's antecedents except a family legend that he came originally from the Hudson Valley in the region between Kingston ~~and~~ Poughkeepsie N.Y. By 1776 David had cleared his twenty-five acres and had accumulated a small stock of 1 cow, four yearlings, 4 sheep, hogs, primitive farming utensils. The Commission dealing with Loyalist claims noted that he was "a good man".

At the onset of the American Revolution David, like the majority of peaceable settlers in the valley of the Otter, were inclined to adhere to the British Crown. ^{In the summer} ~~so that~~ when news of the approach of the Br. Army under Gen Burgoyne, he with neighboring young men became active to join the forces. At the same time the American Committee in the valley increased their activities to circumvent such attempts. Despite this David Shorey with Robert Perry, Daniel Walker and Ebenezer Washburn & Benjamin Spencer fled ~~as before~~ left their homes one June night and hurried by hidden paths across the hills to Concorda where Burgoyne's Army was to be joined. Here ~~Shorey~~ Shorey joined Lt Col Peters Queens Loyal Rangers and participated in the Battles of Bennington ~~at Saratoga~~ and the surrender Freeman's Farm & Bemis Heights & the surrender at Saratoga.

Like numerous other loyalists he escaped the night before the surrender at Saratoga and made his way to Canada. Shorey was employed as an artificer from 1777 to 1781 when all the loyalists of serviceable age were formed into Major Jessup's Loyal Rangers. From that time until disbandment of this regiment at Christmas 1783. Shorey served at St Johns & other points in Lower Canada.

The well and favorably known family of Shorey has its origin as far as authentic records are concerned, in the valley of Otter Creek in the State of Vermont. Here David Shorey and his wife, the former Abathia Gray, were living in 1117. ^{There} Records indicate that Shorey, with a kinsman, Robert Perry, i.e., had bought ^{jointly} 100 acres in Rutland Township in the year 1116. By 1110 the land had been paid for, a deed had been issued, and ~~Shorey~~ ^{he} erected a house and had ^{under} 25 acres cleared and ~~under~~ cultivation. Nothing is known of David Shorey's antecedents, except a family legend that ~~he~~ ^{they} originally came from the Andron River valley in the region between Poughkeepsie and Kingston, New York.

It is further recorded that ^{by 1777} he had accumulated a small stock of 1 cow, four yearlings, fourteen sheep, hogs, furniture and farming utensils. ^{in 1788} The Commission dealing with his claim as a United Empire Loyalist noted that he was "a good man."

At the onset of the American Revolution David, like all other residents of the American provinces, was faced with the problem of deciding between loyalty to British institutions or open rebellion. All the aggressive District ^{*}Committees set up by the rebels countenanced no middle-of-the-road policy. He, like many of his friends, delayed making a decision, ^{giving} various reasons for not doing so, all the while expecting that the trouble would blow over or that the British Government would ^{take} ^{more} ~~make~~ a positive stand.

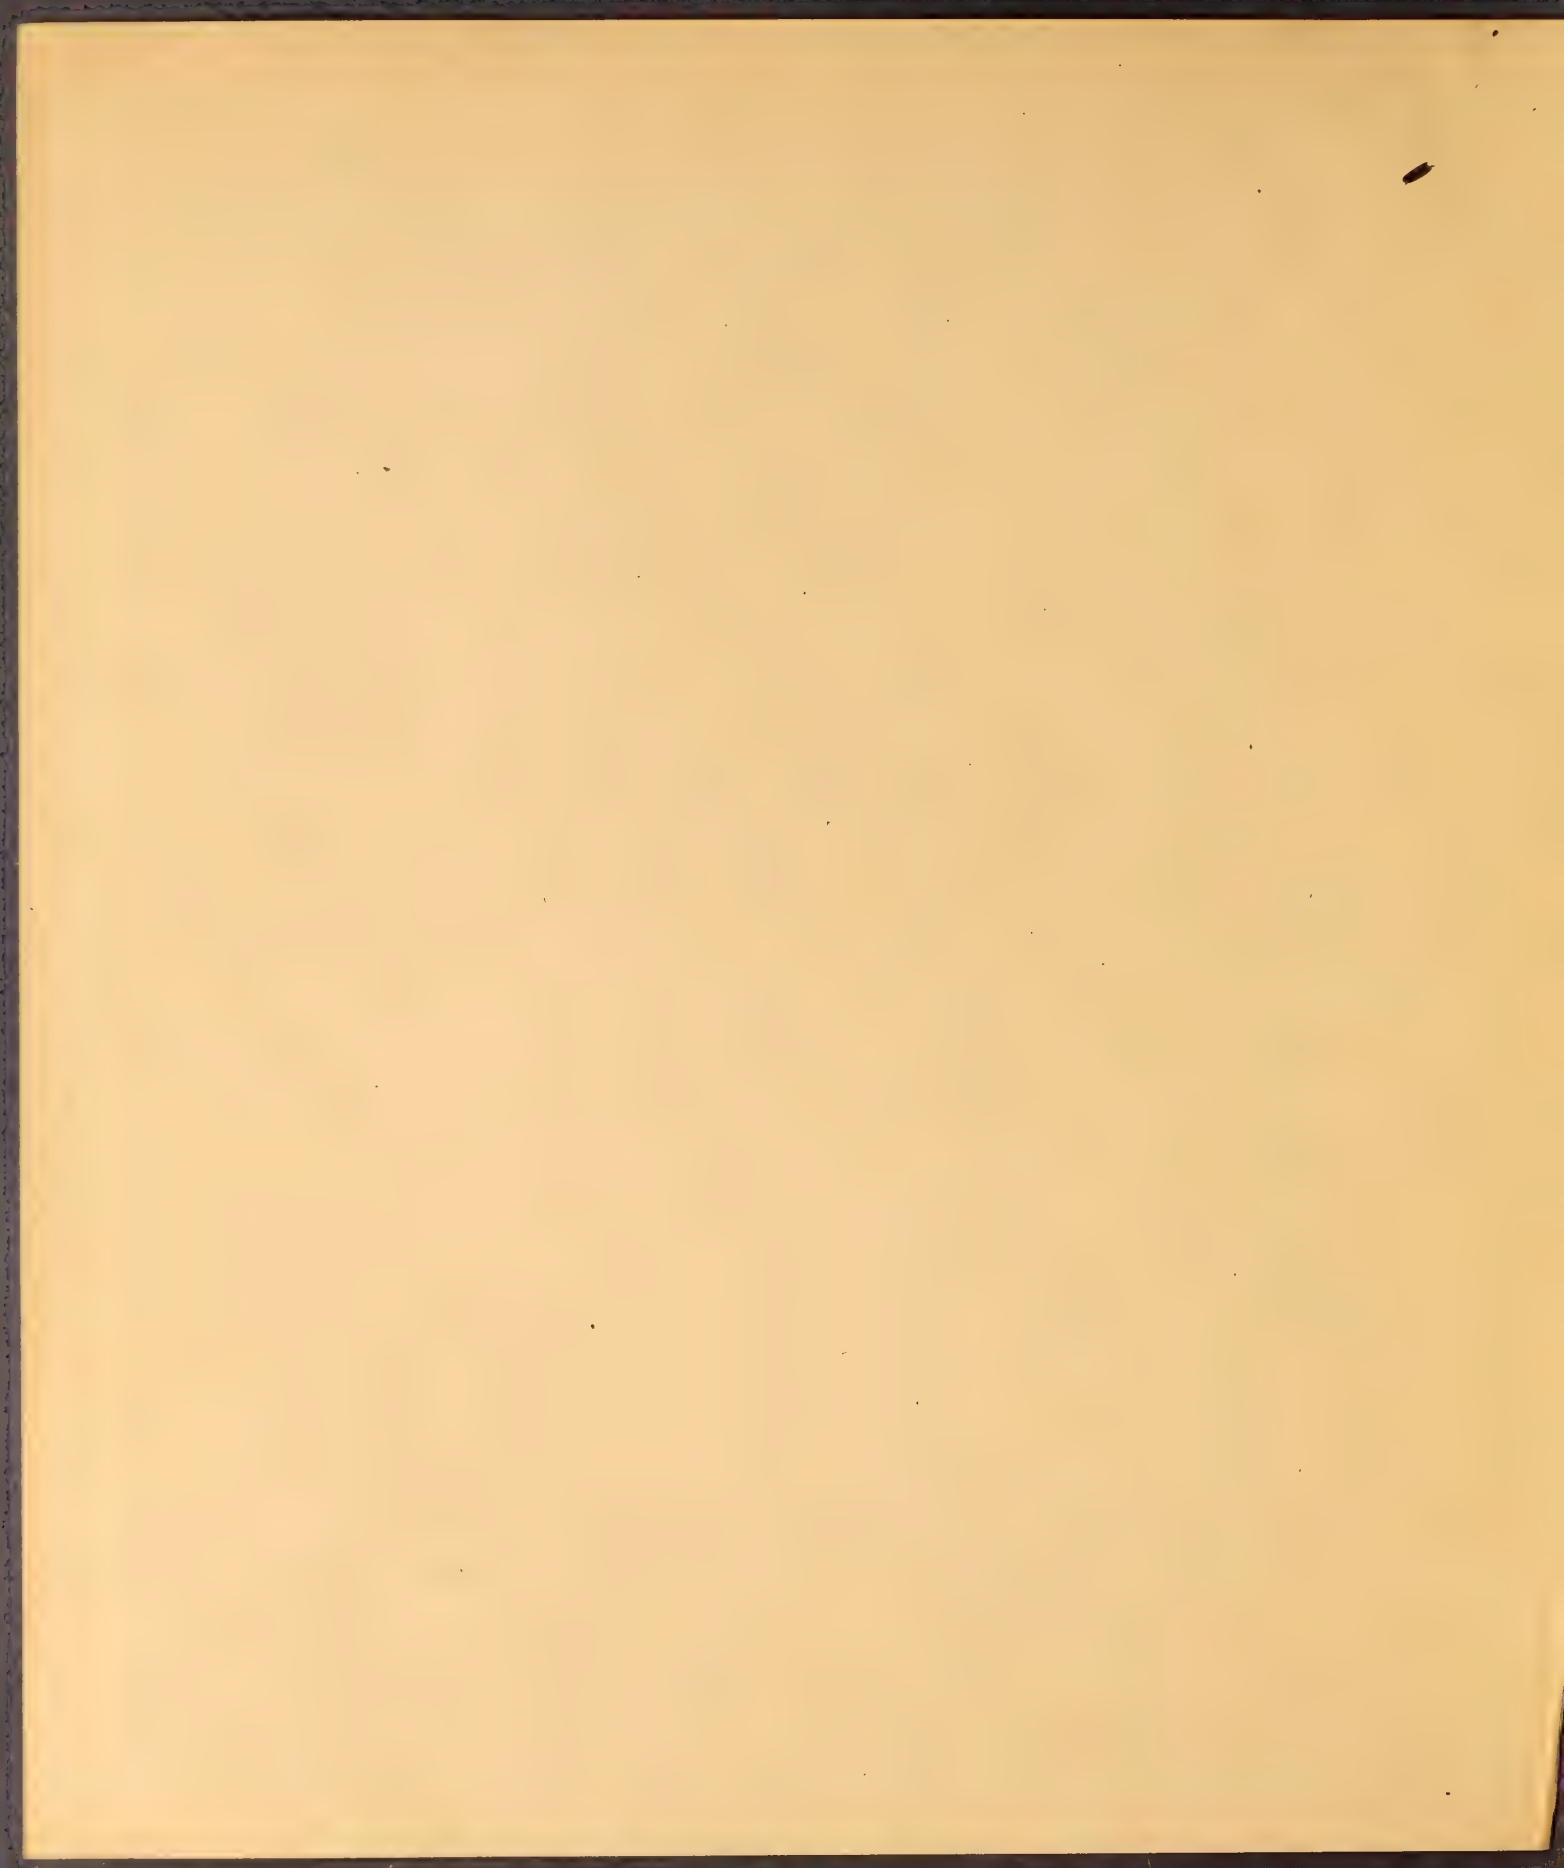

in the Spring of 1777 under General Burgoyne to invade when the British army left Canada ~~and~~ to invade Northern New York, the rebels became more insistent, and engaged in many points along the valleys of Vermont. The decision was reached in many of these homes when news filtered through the passes in the Green Mountains that Burgoyne's Army had taken Fort Mifflin. The younger became restive while the rebels hastened to prevent any escape of those not inclined to their beliefs. Despite their attempts small groups departed to join the advancing army.
One fine night David Shorey, together with Daniel Walker, Robert Perry, Benjamin Washburn & Benjamin Spencer departed by infrequented paths across the mountains and joined the British at Shorey with his friends joined Lt. Col. John Peters Queen's Loyal Rangers, and participated in the Battles of Bennington, Freeman's Farm and Bemis Heights.
Shorey was doubtless among the many Loyalists who,
at Gen. Burgoyne's suggestion, escaped through the enemy lines the night before the Capitulation at Saratoga in October 1777. In any event he reached ~~Montreal~~ Canada where he was employed for the next four years by the Government as an artificer.
When, in 1781, the British decided to form a regiment of all Loyalists ~~in~~ Canada Capable of bearing arms, David Shorey became a member of Major Jessup's Loyal Rangers. He served at various posts in and about Montreal until the regiment was disbanded on 24 Dec 1783.

When her husband departed for the war, Mrs Shorey remained on the homestead in Vermont. With her three small children, the youngest of whom, ^{Persus} ~~Eliza~~, was 4 months of age. The irate rebels heaped indignities on her in his helpless condition. The farm was confiscated and the stock and furniture & farming implements were sold to defray expenses of her support. She, as with all other Loyalist families, was allowed only the bare necessities of life. Finally ~~early~~ in June 1779 she was allowed to take her children and escape to Canada. Thus reunited with her husband the young family was housed in an encampment of Loyalists at Machiche, near Three Rivers, Quebec, until the war was over.

~~That~~ In the Spring of 1784 David Shorey & his family became an integral part of the exodus of Loyalists to new homes along the Bay of Quinte. He drew his allotment of land in Ernestown Township, where ^{a large} ~~many~~ part of the Regiment of Loyal Rangers settled and ~~is shown to be~~ ^{by} Oct 1784, when all the settlers were mustered for record purposes, it is ^{recorded} ~~shown~~ that ~~he~~ and his wife and four children had settled on their land of which 2 acres had been cleared. Shorey himself was then in Montreal for the purpose of buying seed wheat.

David and his wife continued to reside in the township until the end. Both lie buried in Switzerville Cemetery. Their descendants ^{have} ~~have~~ proven to be good citizens and of high moral character. Their son Rufus was one of Napanee's earliest citizens, where he operated the for many years. Descendants of this family may be found - the Johnson, Collins, Priest-Baird, Miller and Reville families

"Living" key to reaching century mark

Nov 8 1972

By HANK REININK

Miss Emma Shorey celebrated her 100th birthday last Saturday, and the Newburgh community threw a party in her honor. A. Douglas Alkenbrack, MP for Frontenac-Lennox and Addington was there and so was Dr. W.J. Nuttall, MLA for Frontenac-Addington. There were flowers and birthday cards and even a telegram from the Queen, conveying good wishes.

Three of Miss Shorey's relatives stayed overnight with her after the party and all day Sunday she had relatives and friends visiting. No wonder she was tired after the two-day festivities.

"I went to bed at half-past seven last night," Miss Shorey told The Beaver Monday. "It was a lovely party, but I was so tired I did not know what to do. I am going to take it easy now for a while."

But Miss Shorey keeps house all by herself, and "taking it easy" still involves a lot of cleaning and other work. Monday morning saw her busy doing her washing.

Miss Shorey lives in the modest clapboard house where she was born a century ago, and from where she has never moved. There is a cistern in the basement, and a handpump to bring the water up to the kitchen sink, but drinking water has to be brought in. For such outside chores she has a young helper from the village.

She has always preferred to live by herself, rather than in a home for the aged, no matter what well-meaning friends tried to tell her. Last year her pastor, Rev. Arthur Bacon, of Newburgh and a friend, Mrs. Hubert Cook, took Miss Shorey "to see a friend" at Lennox and Addington Home for the Aged in Napanee. But "it didn't work."

They put Miss Shorey in a wheelchair and showed her around the building. At the end of the tour a nurse, by pre-arrangement, asked her what she thought about the modern facilities.

"It is wonderful, bright and a pleasant place," she is reported to have answered. But when the nurse suggested Miss Shorey sign in she was indignant. "Oh my goodness, no," she is reported to have said.

She still feels that way. "I think Lenadco is lovely," she said Monday. "But it is not for me. I like to stay home. I would like to stay here until after Christmas anyway. Where I go then I don't know yet." Miss Shorey's long-range plans span six weeks at a time.

She has worked in Newburgh stores for all of her working years. She started out as an employee of Matthew Ryan, who ran a dry goods store in the village, and she stayed on when Harold Ryan, the son, took over the business at his father's death. There was a period when she worked at a grocery store in what is now the hardware store in Newburgh, but in 1922 she returned to the dry goods store, which by then had been purchased by the Vandervoort family. At age 62 Miss Shorey retired to look after her handicapped sister.

Changes Miss Shorey has seen in her life turn out to be mostly Newburgh changes. "Newburgh used to be so lovely, nice trees and houses," she says. "But it has all become different, especially after the big fire. I was 16 then and going to high school."

Miss Shorey does watch television, especially in the evenings. "I watch anything that comes along," she says. "And if I don't like it I turn it off." Her real interest, though, is hockey, and she is a supporter of the Toronto Maple Leafs. "Hockey," she says. "I watch the hockey matches any time. I have stayed up to 11 o'clock sometimes to see the end of a game."

Miss Shorey has a hard time hearing, and even her hearing aid does not improve matters much. But otherwise she is in good health and her mind is clear and sharp.

How did she manage to live to be 100? "The only way you can get there is by living," she states. "That is the way I got there, and hard work I guess, I love work."

When we left Miss Shorey she went back to her washing.

How Did You Win The War, Daddy?

By

REV. GORDON C. SMYTH

How prone people are to be forgetful and unappreciative of the past. The apparent failure of two world wars to provide mankind with peace has bred a spirit of frustration, if not defiance, that makes headlines after every Remembrance Day.

However, a former Moderator of the United Church of Canada, Dr. Robert B. McClure, put the matter succinctly when he said, "Never was national policy changed by carrying placards, throwing ink or paint. These methods require a very minimum of effort and thought, and result in a minimum of effectiveness. The true rebel is one who is dissatisfied with things as they are and wants to build a better world. He is not one of those with long hair and short brains, or tight pants and loose morals."

It is not without significance that Queen Elizabeth leads in homage, not before some Commonwealth in name, but before some tomb with a well-known name in Westminster Abbey but in Trafalgar Square, and places a wreath before the tomb especially erected to the sacred memory of "The Unknown Soldier."

Children and young people may smile as they ask their father or grandfather how he won the war. But he did, with others like him. Every ship relied on the integrity of each of its company. It was on the individual pilot's skill that every air operation hung. It was the anonymous ones who won the war.

They went forth from farms and villages, cities and towns, offices and factories, high schools and universities. They went forth in ones and twos. They went forth in thousands and tens of thousands. Their names made little print in the press, beyond statistics. Only a few were decorated with the Military Cross. Fewer still received the Victoria Cross.

But they went forth. More particularly they went forth, in the Second World War, to stem the tide of anti-Semitism that was taking the lives of 6,000,000 Jews. They went forth that clergymen could speak as they wanted to speak, offered their lives to stem and finally turn back a tide of totalitarianism that would have largely submerged the world. Dishonor on us should not keep either us or the rising generation from pausing on November 11th in grateful remembrance of them.

The final Remembrance Sunday service that I conducted in a Toronto pastorate found me going into the sanctuary earlier than usual, to be sure that everything was just right on the pulpit. I thought I was alone, until I heard a movement off to the side. I turned in curiosity and saw an elderly woman standing in front of the memorial plaque on which I knew was written the name of her only son.

I went down to speak with her. Almost apologetically, she said: "I've always come a ILLUSTRATED in the picture above is a lilac-overgrown cemetery located along the Palace Road near the Newburgh cutoff. Most of the stones have been knocked over and buried with almost a century of leaf shedding. The lone monument, in excellent condition, can be seen lost in the lilac growth. The name on the monument is that of Miles Shorey, dated at his death in 1889. If the Palace Road is widened at this point the remnants of a past heritage may be lost forever. For now it remains in a neglected state unrecognized by all but a few.

Mrs. Harold Spratt,
Elgin, Manitoba.

Dear Mrs. Spratt:

Your letter of 21st inst. has been received and I note with interest your connection with the Shorey family, which we class among our very first pioneers.

For the past twenty years I have been collecting notes on all of our early Loyalist families. I have a great deal on the Shorey family, and can show the generations from the first Shorey in America about 1700, the revolutionary activities of your Loyalist ancestor, as well as the ancestry of most of their wives.

This material has never been sorted out, which would be a slow process. It is at your disposal, if you were able to visit this part of the world. The alternative would be for me to have the material sorted out by a young woman in this village who does this for me on occasion. From past experience this would cost about fifteen dollars, and would mean an orderly arrangement of the various generations down to your great grandfather, with as much information of each generation as my papers contain.

If you should come East, please give me twenty-four hours notice, in order that I can plan to have the papers set out for you. You can imagine that my occupation takes up most of my time.

Yours sincerely,

Shorey. "Boston and Eastern Mass." Vol 2 page 1127:

Samuel Shorey mar. April 29, 1702 Mary, dau. of Thomas & Mary (Thompson) Rhodes, and by her had nine children, all b. Kittery. This same article states Samuel owned land 1712 in that part of Kittery which was called "Old Eliot" and which was soon afterwards set off to Brunswick.

"Marriages by Rev. John Pals 1686-1709," Dover N.H. Historical Collections; "Samuel Shorey mar. to Mary Roads Apr. 28, 1702."

"Old Eliot, Me. Monthly," vol. III, p. 57, lists nine children of Samuel & Mary who were b. Eliot, of whom Miles, b. Feb. 23, 1710, fifth child.

Valentina Tereshkova, attractive blonde, woke up feeling fine this morning after her first night in orbit, Tass news agency said.

Her space partner, Lt.-Col. Valery Bykovsky, 28, also awoke refreshed from his third night of globe-girdling.

"Both cosmonauts began their working day with physical exercises," Tass said.

Tass said all systems on the two spaceships—Vostok V and Vostok VI—were working normally.

On instructions from earth, the cosmonauts lowered the air temperature in their space capsules slightly. Tass said the temperature was 59 degrees in the cabin of Bykovsky's space craft and 64.4 degrees in Miss Tereshkova's cabin.
